Residents' Associations and Groups

At Newlon we recognise the value of resident involvement. We want to support residents to be active in their communities and have a positive effect by working alongside our staff and other agencies.

A residents' association or a more informal residents' group is set up and run by residents to represent the views of people living in the block, estate or street. It brings together people who share common concerns and who work together to resolve them.

Collectively you can tackle your concerns more effectively with Newlon and other organisations in the community. Local councillors and agencies such as the police can be more receptive to the concerns of a collective voice. The more involved you become in your block, estate or street, the more influence you have in the way it develops.

Getting started

Here are a few guidelines to help you on your way:

- Identify what issues you want to tackle and seek views from other residents.
- Encourage your neighbours to talk to each other. Be prepared to listen to ideas that they have.
- It is important that everyone in your block, estate or street has the opportunity to be involved.
- Set up a group email and use different methods to ensure communication reaches all residents.
- Have an agenda, make sure that the purpose of your meeting is clear and it relates to any issues of concern in your area.
- Encourage your group to be realistic. Being successful a little at a time will bring confidence. This will mean that not everyone gets what she or he wants straight away, but you should be more successful in the long run.

Discuss what type of involvement would be more suitable, e.g. a formal Residents' Association or an informal residents' group. Here are the pros and cons of these options:

- Residents' Associations are widely recognised, have clear structures and responsibilities, regular meetings and a committee and officers to drive the work of the association. On the other hand, they can take time to set up and run (e.g. regular meetings) and is process driven. Keeping residents involved can be difficult. As a Residents' Association you may be able to access funding to run projects.
- Informal residents' groups do need to have terms of reference (set of rules) though they take less time to set-up and can agree task and/or location based coordinators instead of a committee and officers. This does mean that there is no overall leader like a Chair and a recognised structure. The group can later develop into a residents' association.

A summary of the different types of involvement and key points on each option is included in this handbook.

How Newlon can help you to set up an Association or Group

Newlon's Resident Involvement team can guide you in setting up a residents' association or an informal residents' group for your block, estate or street(s).

The team can assist you in developing a group. We will normally attend up to three of your meetings in the lead-up to the launch of the group. The team can provide the following assistance:

- Help to gauge interest in forming a group from other residents and to identify their concerns, e.g. a survey of residents.
- Attending the initial meeting to form a steering group of interested residents.
- Exploring options with the steering group on how the group is set-up and run, e.g. as an informal or formal association or a one-off issue based group.
- Advising on the model constitution, code of conduct and terms of reference (for informal groups). These documents are included in this handbook.
- Attending the formal launch of the association or group once the preliminary meetings are over and enough interest exists to go forward.

We know that a new group needs time to get sufficient support from the people it aims to represent. Residents will need to commit to taking an active role to set up and sustain an association or group. Be prepared to spend time to build support and encourage residents to join and take on some of the tasks. We can give you contact details for established associations who can share their experience of setting up their groups. We can also advise you on ways to gather momentum and you can find some useful tips on page 3 of this handbook, in the 'Getting started' section.

How we work with Residents' Associations and informal Residents' Groups

Finance and practical help from Newlon

- We can help you with publicity.
- We will help you find a venue.
- We will pay for the venue hire and refreshment costs for the initial meetings and the AGM for the association or the launch of the informal residents' group.
- When you have had the Annual General Meeting (AGM), a signed constitution and opened a bank account for a residents' association, you can apply for a set-up grant from Newlon of up to £300. This is to cover the cost of hall hire, beverages, expenses (e.g. telephone calls made on behalf of the association) and, where necessary, contributions toward childcare.
- An annual running cost grant in subsequent years will be dependent on the receipt by Newlon of your expenditure records (including receipts and invoices) and minutes of your AGM.
- For informal residents' groups with signed terms of reference, we will review the amount of funding required with each group, agree record-keeping and submission of expenditure data (including receipts and invoices) to Newlon.
- Residents' associations and informal residents' groups can also apply to Newlon for grants for social events and one-off projects.
- We will offer training for new and existing officers of the association or group and we will reimburse all additional expenditure incurred, such as travel costs.

Having a set of rules

Residents' Association – your constitution and code of conduct

A constitution is a simple document that sets out clearly who you are, why you exist and how you will organise and run your association to achieve your goals in a way that is open and accessible.

The code of conduct is an agreement on the rules of behaviour for all the members, such as within meetings

An example of a constitution and code of conduct is included in the handbook. You can use or adapt this draft for your own group. Please contact the Resident Involvement team for help with your constitution and code of conduct so that it suits your own group. It can be emailed to you for ease of use.

The constitution and code of conduct will be agreed and adopted at the first AGM and signed by the elected officers.

An informal residents' group – your terms of reference

The terms of reference describes the purpose of the group, membership, communication, and ways of working, e.g. the scope and authority of the block representatives/coordinators. The terms of reference also includes ground rules on behaviour and conduct

A draft terms of reference example is included with this handbook which can be adapted to suit your own group. This can be emailed to you on request.

Making things happen – what we will expect from your Residents' Association or informal Residents' Group

We want to be certain that your association or group is an open, democratic group and responsible for the actions of its members.

- A Residents' Association will need to hold an AGM to launch the association and in subsequent years following the launch. A copy of the AGM documents will need to be provided to Newlon, including minutes, names of elected officers, the committee and general members, the signed constitution and agreed code of conduct.
- An informal residents' group will need to hold a launch meeting to set up the group and agree the terms of reference. Review meeting should be arranged in line with the terms of reference. A copy of the minutes of the launch meeting, names of coordinators or block representatives and the agreed terms of reference should be provided to us.
- You will need to have regular meetings (in line with your constitution or terms of reference) and keep minutes of every meeting.
- You will be expected to seek the views of and to represent the various needs of residents in the area where you live.
- You will need to be mindful of members' diversity and encourage participation from those who are under-represented in your group, to stand for election or take part in the wider work of the association or group.
- You will need to follow your rules and code of conduct to ensure all members conduct themselves in a reasonable manner at all times, when liaising with Newlon and other organisations and when attending meetings.
- Resident group members will not receive more favourable treatment than other individual residents when reporting repairs or other service related matters and will need to contact us in the same way. Details on how to contact us can be found on page 2 of this handbook in the 'Contacting us' section.
- It is important to update the Resident Involvement team on any changes in the management of the association or group or if you need any additional support to maintain the group.

Forming a Residents' Association

The role of the Chair

The Chair and other officers are elected at an Annual General Meeting (AGM). If the Chair (or other officer role) is not elected at the AGM, the Chair (or other officer role) is selected by the committee members until the next general meeting.

A good Chair needs to have:

- Patience and tact in dealing with other people.
- The ability to command respect.
- The ability to keep people under control during meetings.
- The ability to be as impartial as possible when discussing topics even if you have a particular interest in what is being discussed.

The Chair has to make sure the decisions made at meetings are done so in a proper manner. They also normally act as spokesperson or leader of the group, so they would need the skills to do that.

Outside of meetings they should:

- Be aware of all the activities carried out by the association.
- Ensure other officers are carrying out their tasks.
- Prepare agendas for meetings (with the Secretary).

In meetings they should:

- Make sure each item on the agenda is discussed and a decision made and recorded.
- Make sure everyone gets an opportunity to contribute to the discussion.

Above all the role of the Chair is to take responsibility for the smooth and fair running of the organisation.

The role of the Vice Chair

It could be useful to have a Vice-Chair, she or he will Chair the meeting in the absence of the Chair. It is recommended that the Vice-Chair chairs a meeting where the Chair has an interest in a particular subject as this gives the Chair the option to put their point of view across.

The role of the Secretary

The Secretary's job is to keep people informed so they are involved and therefore able to join in what the group does. Some duties include:

- Planning and writing agendas in partnership with the Chair.
- Bringing matters which need action to the attention of the committee.
- Ensuring that the number of meetings stated in the constitution actually take place.
- Organising the meeting venue and making sure that members know when and where the meetings will take place.
- Keeping records of all information relating to the association, including a record of membership.
- Taking the minutes and sending these out to members.

- Replying to letters and enquiries on behalf of the association.
- Helping the Chair with follow-up work between meetings.

Some of these jobs can be spread amongst others committee members.

The minutes are one of the most important aspects of the job and can be daunting. However it needn't be. They should include the following items:

- Statement of the name of the association, date, time and place of meeting.
- A list of those present and any apologies.
- They should follow the agenda.
- They should be clear, concise, easy to read and understand.
- They should include all decisions made, and any key arguments leading to that decision.
- They should have an "actions" column stating who is responsible for carrying out the decisions or actions agreed.
- They should be written up and sent out soon after the meeting.
- The Secretary should keep a full set of minutes for future reference.

The role of the Treasurer

For details of the main duties of the Treasurer, please see the main body of the Constitution.

The Committee

The main role is to:

- Carry out the work of the Residents' Association on behalf of all the members.
- Manage the association according to the rules set out in the constitution.
- Organise general meetings for all members of the association, including the AGM.
- Act upon decisions taken by members at general meetings.
- Take decisions on behalf of the members between general meetings.
- Represent the views and interest of all members between general meetings.
- Consult members and report back to them on decisions taken.

Running an effective committee

Here are a few basic points:

- Make sure everyone understands the aims and objectives of the association.
- The committee will need to decide which of these are more easily achievable and set short term and long term goals accordingly.
- Share the work amongst committee members and keep to the agreed schedule of meetings.
- Keep members of the Association informed – door knock, produce leaflets and advertise meetings.

Code of Conduct

The purpose of having a Code of Conduct is to set standards of behaviour for all members.

To this end, all members are expected to abide by the following procedures that are adopted.

1. Conduct at meetings

- Members shall be courteous and support each other with the aim of achieving the best possible decisions.
- To speak only when called by the Chair.
- To listen without interruption to other residents and invited guests.
- To indicate to the Chair when you wish to speak.
- To keep comments brief and to the point - i.e. the subject being discussed.
- The use of offensive language (e.g. swearing, racist or sexist remarks) or behaviour that belittles or excludes groups or individuals is unacceptable and will be considered as an act of gross misconduct.
- Late arrivals should enter quietly and not disrupt the meeting with apologies.
- To allow the Chair to direct the meeting, including bringing the discussion to a close.
- The Chair has a duty to run the meeting with fairness to all present.
- Individual issues must not be discussed at the meeting. Individuals can report their issues directly to Newlon.

2. Conduct of the committee

- Members should not bring the association into disrepute, e.g. anti-social behaviour.
- Members should conduct themselves in a reasonable manner at all times when liaising with Newlon and other organisations.
- Members should not speak or write on behalf of the group without prior agreement of the group. Any correspondence sent on behalf of the group should be made available to all members of the association.
- Members of the committee shall at all times work within the rules laid down in the constitution.
- Members should observe collective responsibility for committee decisions.

3. Confidentiality

- The association may deal with difficult and sensitive issues; discretion and care must be exercised during and after the meetings.
- Members should respect all individual residents' confidentiality whether present or not. Information about individual residents will not be discussed at public meetings.
- Any information or items shared with Newlon that is of a confidential nature must not be disclosed to anyone else apart from committee members of the group in order to allow the business of that specific meeting to take place.

4. Political affiliation

Members may not represent a political party in their role as a member of the association.

5. Discrimination

No member will discriminate on any grounds against any other member of the association or public. Discriminatory language will not be used in discussions or in any other communication. All those who attend meetings have the right to be treated with dignity and respect.

6. Conflicts of interest

Members should disclose any interest, whether personal or on behalf of any group that they represent, that they consider could affect or influence their approach to the matter under discussion.

7. Breach of the Code of Conduct

- If a member of the committee or those attending the meeting do not abide by the Code of Conduct, they will be warned by the Chair (of that meeting/event).
- The Chair may give the person concerned two further warnings (a maximum of three warnings in anyone meeting). Breaking the code three times means that the resident will be asked to leave the meeting.
- If the person continues to ignore these rules and refuses to leave the meeting after being warned by the Chair, then the Chair has the power to close the meeting.
- Subsequent exclusion from meetings will take place when a majority of those present at any meeting of the association or AGM vote to exclude a member (who has previously received three warnings).
- A complaint that a committee member has failed to abide by the Code of Conduct despite receiving three warnings or has committed an act that is considered to be gross misconduct or conduct which contravenes the objectives of the association, should be tabled at a committee meeting called for this purpose only.
- All parties must be notified in writing in advance and care must be taken to ensure that all concerned parties are given a fair hearing. On the findings of this hearing, the committee can suspend a member with a majority vote decision. The suspension will be ratified at this meeting and the suspension can take place with immediate effect and last for one year.

8. All members must observe this Code of Conduct whenever they:

- Attend meetings of the association.
- Are acting in their role as a committee member.
- Are carrying out the work of the association or acting on their behalf.

Draft Terms of reference for ..... (insert name of group)

Aims of the (insert name) Residents' Group

- 1 The main aim of the ..... [insert name] Residents' Group is to represent the interests of all Newlon residents living at [insert address of estate or block]. These interests will vary from time to time and may include:
  - where there are issues of concern that affect all or several residents and it will be in the interest of all to take a common approach to finding a solution.
  - where it is felt that organising a community event will be desirable to foster good relationships between residents.

By "residents" we mean all those that live in Newlon homes at (insert name of estate or block) - this includes those renting; shared owners; 100% leaseholders; the people who live with them. (Where 100% leaseholders are renting their homes it will be up to the group to decide if the people renting are able to become members.)

Membership and communication

- 1 Every resident of 18 years and over living at ..... [insert name of estate or block] as their primary home, is automatically a member of (insert name of group). It is up to them how involved they want to be at any time.
- 2 To support and encourage all members to be able to contribute fully, the group will distribute information from the group, including notices and minutes of meetings. This could be done using noticeboards and/or by using a digital group or email account.

Ground rules

- 1 All members will be listened to and respected and should feel welcome and safe at meetings and events of the group.
- 2 It is the responsibility of every member to challenge any remarks or behaviour that cause offence or make other members feel unwelcome. We cannot always be in agreement about everything but members are expected to make an effort to compromise.
- 3 Inappropriate or offensive behaviour at a meeting could result in a member being asked to leave, but only after a warning has been given first.
- 4 Members can be excluded for a period of time from the group for repeated inappropriate or offensive behaviour.

Organisation and way of working

- 1 Meetings are a means to an end, and residents have busy lives. The most important thing is to address issues as they arise; sometimes a meeting will be needed to this effect, but not always. The work of the group can be undertaken on an issue by issue basis. The group will hold one meeting each year that all residents are invited to.
- 2 The annual meeting will select a small group of co-ordinators to facilitate the smooth working of the group, work together on common issues and take up specific issues for the homes they cover. The group will decide how many co-ordinators are needed and which homes they cover. Co-ordinators must step down at the next annual meeting but may be re selected.
